Show of Support From Rice

Surprise trip to Iraq coincides with discovery of 38 bodies

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Under heavy guard on a surprise visit Sunday, Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice said Iraq's new government realizes it must move quickly to write a constitution that reflects the full spectrum of ethnic and religious groups.

Rice's visit — her first as secretary of state — coincided with the discovery of the bodies of 38 men, including 10 Iraqi soldiers, in three locations. They were shot, execution-style.

Acknowledging the recent increase in deadly attacks, Rice said the insurgency can be beaten not just by force but also by "a political alternative that is strong."

The trip was a closely kept secret even at the State Department and among Iraqi leaders. It underscored the importance that U.S. officials place on the success of the Iraqi government.

Iraq's elected government, three fractious months in the making, is set to expire at year's end. In between, the government is supposed to draft a new constitution and hold new elections.

"This government understands even better than we that the Iraqi people expect a lot," Rice said after meeting with top Iraqi officials.

Some of the momentum from the Jan. 30 elections has evaporated because of political and ethnic squabbles over appointments to government positions. Sunni Arabs are underrepresented and the delay in forming a government may have emboldened militants. ANNE GEARAN (AP)

SPELLING | Cungratulations Grajewitts Poor spelling may prevent hundreds of Lee County, Fla., high school seniors from getting their diplomas this week — but it's not their fault. Some diplomas showed up with misspelled names for students and school board members, officials said; at least one degree misspelled "chairman." School district officials said the graduation paraphernalia company is to blame; the company apologized. But graduation ceremonies will go on as scheduled. (AP) EyeOpeners | Page 2

PARTIES

'Life in Prison? But Hey, Free Cake!'

A Dallas judge who threw a courtroom party with balloons and cake to celebrate the recapture of a man who fled during his trial apologized Thursday after the State Commission on Judicial Conduct admonished her. Dallas District Judge Faith Johnson served ice cream and hung streamers last year for a court proceeding in which Billy Wayne Williams discovered he'd been sentenced in absentia to life in prison. Apparently, Johnson had also planned for a TV crew to capture Williams' expression when he entered the courtroom. Williams was accused of choking his girlfriend to the point of unconsciousness. (AP)

EXPOSURE

The Freedom to Not See 'Tim's Area'

The Michigan Court of Appeals upheld the indecent exposure conviction Wednesday of the producer and host of a comedy show on Grand Rapids' public access cable channel.

Timothy Huffman, 47, ran into trouble after a viewer complained about a sketch that aired April 7, 2000, on "Tim's Area of Control." The three-minute segment consisted of a full-screen close-up of a man's genitals displayed in front of a drape that covered the rest of his body. A face was drawn on the organ and a gruff voice told jokes as though it were speaking. Huffman was sentenced in 2003 but he appealed, arguing his free-speech rights were violated. (AP)

SOCCER

Legooooooooooooaaal!

What is this, a soccer stadium for ants? Bad "Zoolander" references aside, this model of Munich's new Allianz-Arena soccer stadium — on display in Guenzburg, Germany, on Thursday — is reportedly the largest building ever made entirely of Lego pieces. Piecing together the intricately detailed structure took more than 4,200 hours and required the use of more than a million Lego pieces. There were limits to the accuracy of the representation, however, as Lego does not make miniature plastic bratwursts. (AP/EXPRESS)

SCHOOL

Today We Learned About Gun Safety

A gun was fired into the floor at an Anderson County, S.C., middle school Wednesday after a student accidentally pulled the trigger of a deputy's holstered gun. The deputy — a school resource officer assigned to protect the school — was telling students how hard it was to take a gun from an officer's holster when a student grabbed for his gun. The child's finger apparently was small enough to get inside the holster and pull the trigger, police said. Debris cut two students, but no one else was hurt. "He was just trying to be nice to the kids and made a faulty decision," Sheriff David Crenshaw said. (AP)

Newsweek Apologizes For Errors

Story alleging Quran was desecrated led to deadly Afghan protests

NEW YORK | Newsweek magazine has apologized for errors in a story alleging that interrogators at the U.S. detention center in Guantanamo Bay desecrated the Quran, saying it would re-examine the accusations, which sparked outrage and deadly protests in Afghanistan.

Fifteen people died and scores were injured in violence between protesters and security forces, prompting U.S. promises to investigate the allegations.

"We regret that we got any part of our story wrong, and extend our sympathies to victims of the violence and to the U.S. soldiers caught in its midst," Newsweek Editor Mark Whitaker wrote in a note to readers.

In an issue dated May 9, the magazine reported that U.S. military investigators had found evidence that interrogators desecrated the Quran to get inmates to talk.

Newsweek Washington Bureau Chief Daniel Klaidman said on the "CBS Evening News" Sunday that the magazine believes it erred in reporting the allegation that a guard tried to flush the Quran down a toilet and that military investigators had confirmed the accusation. (AP)

Senate Showdown Looms

Both parties claim enough support to win fight over filibusters

WASHINGTON | Amid talk of a possible compromise, the Senate's second-most powerful Republican and Democrat each claimed on Sunday to have enough support for their side's position as the chamber neared a showdown over the minority party's right to block a president's judicial nominees.

Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist, R-Tenn., intends this week to call up for a vote the first of the debated nominees — Texas judge Priscilla Owen and California judge Janice Rogers Brown.

Should Democrats move this week to block either Brown or Owen, and Republicans fail to break the filibuster, Frist then would call for the Senate to vote on whether to ban use of filibusters against judicial nominees.

Both sides said Sunday they had the votes to prevail, even as they acknowledged that several Republicans had yet to say publicly how they would vote.

"I haven't given up on the possibility that we might have 60 votes, including some Democrats who've been whispering in our ears that they believe that this ought to be defused," Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., the chief GOP vote counter, said on "Fox News Sunday."

Illinois Sen. Dick Durbin, the Democrats' vote counter, predicted picking up some GOP support.

"We feel that there are at least four Republican senators who feel as we do and we feel that there are several who are making up their minds" Durbin said on the Fox show. (AP)

BATTLE OVER BOLTON

Bolton would win Senate approval as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations after a bruising confirmation battle in the Foreign Relations Committee. "The president continues to have confidence in John. Republican Senator Richard Lugar, chairman of the Senate committee, told CNN's "Late Edition" that "a majority of senators are in favor of confirming John Bolton." (AP)

Communion Denied to Gay Supporters

ST. PAUL | A Roman Catholic priest denied communion to more than 100 parishioners Sunday, saying they could not receive the sacrament because they wore rainbow-colored sashes to church to show support for gay Catholics.

A group called the Rainbow Sash Alliance has encouraged supporters to wear the multicolored fabric bands since 2001 on each Pentecost Sunday, the day Catholics believe the Holy Spirit came to give power to Christians soon after Jesus ascended to heaven.

But Sunday's service was the first time they had been denied communion at the altar. (AP)

Meaning of Science Weighed in Kan.

Evolution debate stirs call for schools to alter definition of science

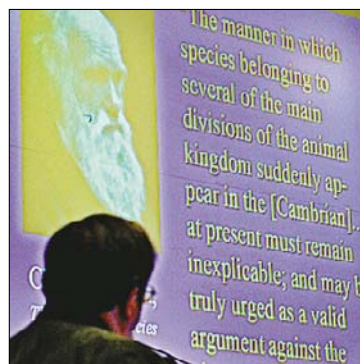

TOPEKA, KAN. | The Kansas school board's hearings on evolution weren't limited to how the theory should be taught in public schools. The board is considering redefining science itself.

Advocates of "intelligent design" are pushing the board to reject a definition limiting science to natural explanations for what's observed in the world.

Instead, they want to define it as "a systematic method of continuing investigation," without specifying what kind of answer is being sought. The definition would appear in the introduction to the state's science standards.

The proposed definition has outraged many scientists, who are frustrated that students could be discussing supernatural explanations for natural phenomena in their science classes.

The conservative state Board of Education plans to consider the proposed changes by August. It is expected to approve at least part of a proposal from advocates of intelligent design, which holds that the natural world is so complex and well-ordered that an intelligent cause is the best way to explain it.

State and national science groups boycotted last week's public hearings, claiming they were rigged against evolution. JOHN HANNA (AP)

Nicotine Vaccine Showing Promise

The world's 1.3 billion smokers soon might have a powerful new way to kick the habit — a vaccine against nicotine.

Nearly 60 percent of smokers who achieved high levels of antibodies against nicotine after receiving the vaccine stopped smoking completely for at least six months, according to a new study presented Saturday at a meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology in Orlando, Fla.

About one-third of those who developed lower levels of antibodies stopped smoking, about the same fraction as those who received a placebo vaccine, according to the study's lead researcher. (L.A. TIMES)

Report: Lower Seat Belt Use In Trucks Linked to Fatalities

A higher percentage of people killed in pickup truck crashes didn't buckle up compared to those in passenger cars, the government planned to report Monday. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration says more than 80 percent of the people in cars wore seat belts in 2003, compared to 70 percent of those in pickup trucks. But the numbers were more stark in terms of fatalities: 70 percent of those killed in pickup truck crashes in 2003 did not wear safety belts, compared to 50 percent of the fatalities in cars. (AP)

Finger in Wendy's Chili Severed in Work Accident

SAN FRANCISCO | The finger that a woman claimed she found in a bowl of Wendy's chili was severed in the tailgate of a truck during a work accident, an employee of an asphalt company said.

Pat Hogue, an estimator with a Las Vegas asphalt maintenance company, told the San Francisco Chronicle for a story in Sunday's editions that a man he was working with lost the tip of his finger on a job five months ago.

Both men were working with

James Plascencia, the husband of Anna Ayala — the Las Vegas woman who claimed she found the finger in a bowl of chili at a Wendy's restaurant in San Jose, Hogue told the paper.

Authorities believe the injured man gave the finger to Plascencia. Ayala is accused of trying to shake down the fast-food giant with a bogus tainted-food claim.

Hogue and investigators have refused to identify the man with the severed finger, but police have said he's cooperating with authorities. (AP)

Oil-for-Food Probe Cites Russians

Iraqis told panel that Russians were paid in exchange for support

WASHINGTON | Former top officials in Saddam Hussein's government told U.S. congressional investigators that they gave millions of dollars worth of oil allocations as a form of pay-off to Russian leaders in hopes of ending U.N. sanctions against Iraq, a congressional panel said.

Hussein's vice president, Taha Yasin Ramadan, told investigators the allocations were "compensation for support," the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs investigations subcommittee said in a report being released Monday.

The investigators said their interviews and documents from the former Iraqi government add to evidence in previous investigations linking Russian officials to abuses in the U.N. oil-for-food program. Among the officials that have been implicated are Alexander Voloshin, former chief of staff to President Vladimir Putin. Russia's foreign ministry declined comment on the report. (AP)

Grisly Finds Near Baghdad

Bodies of 38 men found in 3 different locations

BAGHDAD | The bodies of 38 men shot execution-style were found dumped around an abandoned chicken farm, a trash-strewn lot and an insurgent stronghold west of the capital, police said Sunday. The grisly finds were the latest in an endless stream of violence, much of it designed to destabilize Iraq's new government and hasten a U.S. retreat.

More than 450 people have been killed in just over two weeks since Prime Minister Ibrahim al-Jaafari's Cabinet was announced. At least 10 more Iraqis were killed in a spree of bombings and shootings Sunday.

Police in Baghdad's Sadr City, a Shiite-dominated slum, discovered 13 slain men, most appearing to be in their 20s, lying face down in a shallow grave in a lot Sunday. Residents told police a truck dumped the bodies there early Sunday and three people covered them with dirt.

Eleven more bodies were found late Saturday at a deserted chicken farm in Huqoul, about 25 miles south of the capital, police said. The victims had their hands tied behind their backs and gunshot wounds to the head, an AP journalist said.

On Sunday, the bullet-riddled bodies of a judge, an Education Ministry official and a bodyguard were discovered near the same farm and taken to Iskandariyah General Hospital, an official there said. A fourth body was found dumped on a major road, with a bullet wound in the head, he said. The official asked not to be named. (AP)

Nepal Says 600 Students Nabbed by Rebels Rescued

KATMANDU, NEPAL | Soldiers rescued about 600 students who were abducted from their classrooms last week in western Nepal in a series of bold strikes by communist rebels, army officials said Sunday.

The students were rescued during an operation in the mountainous Niskot village, said a statement issued by the Royal Nepalese Army headquarters in the capital, Katmandu.

There were no casualties in the operation and there was no clash between the soldiers and guerrillas. The rebels apparently fled before the army reached the village, said one official, who did not want to be named for security reasons.

The rebels have fought since 1996 to overthrow Nepal's constitutional monarchy and replace it with a communist state. In the past, they have taken students from their schools for a few days to indoctrinate them with their revolutionary ideology, and they have returned most of them safely. (AP) citizens protesting dire economic conditions.

About 500 bodies were laid out in rows at an Andijan school, according to a doctor in the town, seeming to corroborate other witness accounts of hundreds killed. The doctor spoke by telephone on condition she not be named. She did not say how she arrived at her estimate.

The Uzbek Foreign Ministry on Sunday denied that government forces had opened fire on demonstrators. President Islam Karimov has said 10 government soldiers and "many more" protesters died in the Friday conflict. Since then the government has imposed a near-total news blackout on the region.

If the estimates of 500 dead hold true and if Uzbek forces were behind the killing, Friday's violence would be one of the worst incidents of state-inspired bloodshed since the massacre of protesters in China's Tiananmen Square in 1989. (AP)

Verdict Expected In Trial of Yukos Founder in Russia

MOSCOW | Mikhail Khodorkovsky, whose Yukos oil company was dismantled by the state during his 19 months in jail, is to hear the verdict against him Monday in the most closely watched trial in post-Soviet Russia.

His politically charged trial on charges of fraud and tax evasion has been widely seen as Kremlin revenge for the support that Russia's one-time richest man gave to opposition parties and a move to stifle his perceived political ambitions.

The verdict was postponed without explanation April 27, just hours before its announcement. (AP)

Ethiopians Pack Polling Stations

Turnout put at 85% in vote; opposition leader
hints at coming fight

ADDIS ABABA, ETHIOPIA | Ethiopians voted in the millions Sunday, responding enthusiastically to an unprecedentedly open parliamentary race between the coalition that ended a brutal dictatorship and an opposition promising greater liberalization.

The worst problem foreign election observers found was the crowds, with some voters waiting hours to cast their ballots. More than 25 million people had registered and election officials estimated turnout at more than 85 percent.

A senior opposition official with the Coalition for Unity and Democracy said after the vote that his party's observers had been chased out of polling centers where ballots were being tallied. Berhanu Nega said his party had not yet decided whether to accept the results.

Possibly fearing action by opposition parties, Prime Minister Meles Zenawi, known as one of the continent's more progressive leaders, declared a ban on demonstrations in Addis Ababa, effective Monday, and put the police under his direct command. Berhanu charged Meles was attempting to cover up voting fraud.

Provisional results were to be announced on Monday. (AP)

4 Small Bombs in Spain Blamed on ETA

MADRID | Suspected members of the Basque separatist group ETA set off four small bombs in the troubled northern region Sunday, officials said, two days after Spain's government made an unprecedented proposal for Parliament to endorse talks with ETA if it gives up violence.

Two policemen and a security guard were treated in a hospital and released after inhaling toxic fumes at a chemical plant where one of the blasts occurred. All the bombs were placed at industrial sites, police said. They were the first blamed on ETA in nearly three months. (AP)

? SINCE YOU ASKED

Q Isn't Metro able to come up with a better solution for occasional riders, like tourists, who now have to buy a SmarTrip card just to park in Metro lots?

A Metro is exploring a solution in "limited-use" fare cards, which generally are paper but have an embedded computer chip, like Metro's plastic SmarTrip card, said Murray Bond, director of SmarTrip operations. But their use at Metro is "really down the road," he said.

Fare boxes at parking areas and rail stops would need an upgrade, since they now read only the chip inside SmarTrips. And the newer cards are still too expensive, at 20 to 30 cents apiece, Bond estimated (Metro pays just a fraction of a cent for each paper mag-stripe card, he said). But the card's cost could eventually be reduced by pooling purchases with other transit agencies. Metro's Board would determine the cost to riders, he said. DANNY FREEDMAN (EXPRESS)

WASHINGTON | 70TH ANNIVERSARY

TIES THAT BIND: War veterans Art Rivera, Donald Burkes and Raymond Smith present the colors on Sunday during the 70th anniversary of the D.C. War Memorial in West Potomac Park in Southwest Washington.

BY THE NUMBERS: More than 1,000 murder cases in the area have gone unsolved over the past 10 years, according to the Washington Times. Of 198 murders in D.C. this year, about 60 percent have led to arrests. Montgomery County has made arrests in about 88 percent of its 17 homicides and Fairfax has solved nearly 89 percent of its nine cases so far this year. (AP)

D.C. Aims to Ban E-Trash Dumping

City leaders strive to recycle '100 percent' of outdated technology

WASHINGTON | Local officials in the nation's capital are considering banning the curbside disposal of obsolete electronics. Citing the success of an semiannual electronics recycling program, officials are planning to operate the program year-round.

"We've got contractors who can recycle 100 percent of all the electronics," said William O. Howland, Jr., director of the District of Columbia Department of Public Works on Saturday.

Howland joined Mayor Anthony A. Williams and other city officials on the parking lot of Rock Creek Park's Carter Barron Amphitheatre to help unload old home entertainment equipment and personal computers from cars and pickup trucks.

The "E-cycling" event marked the conclusion of a spring effort that helped area residents dispose of more than five tractor trailer loads of outdated technology.

"All the monitors, televisions, old computers, cellular telephones and stereos will be broken down, and the materials will be sorted for recycling," said Howland.

While the city operates two trash transfer stations, it contracts for landfill space at facilities in Maryland and Virginia. The transfer stations, which handle refuse from both residential and commercial sources, are being upgraded to accommodate electronics sorting operations.

A facility on Benning Road NE will be completed this summer, and work on the Fort Totten facility in Northeast is expected to be completed in 2006.

Xbox 360 Marks the Spot

New system packs in stuff for gamers both serious and casual

GAMING | Microsoft said its next Xbox will thrill hard-core gamers with mind-blowing graphics and lure in newcomers with free online games, slideshows, music and video chats with friends.

Xbox 360 looks nothing like its bulky predecessor; it's sleek and can stand on one end or lie flat. Its 20-gigabyte hard drive and three powerful processors will enable high-definition graphics and surround sound.

Microsoft will give consumers a peek at Xbox 360 in a MTV special Thursday. The MTV debut is part of Microsoft's strategy to outshine rival Sony, which is not expected to release the next PlayStation until next year. Microsoft said Xbox 360 will arrive in North America this fall.

PlayStation 2 now has 43 percent of the U.S. game console market, compared with Xbox at 19 percent and GameCube at 14 percent, according to analyst Jay Horwitz.

Many Xbox 360 features are for non-gamers, such as movies, music, slide shows or video chats. It has three USB ports for digital cameras, music players and other devices.

Microsoft also hopes its online gaming service, Xbox Live, will grow in popularity with Xbox 360. Xbox Live gamers who can already talk to one another will also be able to see their buddies and competitors in video-chat windows; a video camera will be sold separately. "Gamer guides" will let players introduce themselves to others.

For casual gamers, Microsoft plans to include free online games. "The future of gaming is online ... bringing together massive communities from around the world," said Peter Moore, a Microsoft vice president. ELIZABETH M. GILLESPIE (AP)

Mateo Goes On The DL to Make Room for Byrd

NATIONALS | The Washington Nationals put infielder Henry Mateo back on the 15-day disabled list Sunday with a right shoulder injury, making room on the roster for outfielder Marlon Byrd, who was acquired Saturday.

Byrd came over from the Philadelphia Phillies on Saturday night for Endy Chavez in a swap of former starting center fielders who fell out of favor with their teams.

Byrd, fourth in NL Rookie of the Year voting in 2003, is expected to start against left-handed pitchers for the Nationals. (AP)

BY THE NUMBERS: Sunday's crowd of 44,103 was the largest at RFK Stadium since the April 14 home opener. The Nationals drew 123,517 for the three-game series.

Nats Get Help from Cubs in Victory

Washington bounces back from sloppy game to win Chicago series

NATIONALS | There's little respite in baseball, what with 162 games crammed into six months, road trips giving way to homestands, rare days off, and those occasional 1:05 p.m. starts following post-midnight finishes.

So it's vital to put bad days in the past quickly. The Washington Nationals are learning to do just that, and Chicago Cubs infielder Neifi Perez knows he has to after a miserable Sunday.

Perez's two errors at second base during a rainy sixth inning helped Washington score the go-ahead run, and he went hitless, too, in the Nationals' 5-4 victory over the Cubs.

STOPPED SHORT: Shortstop Cristian Guzman tags out the Cubs' Corey Patterson, who was trying to steal second in the 5th inning of the Nats' 5-4 win on Sunday.

Nick Johnson hit a two-run homer off Greg Maddux in the fifth; right fielder Jose Guillen, ignoring his painful ribs, crashed into the wall to catch Derrek Lee's deep drive in the seventh; and Hector Carrasco (1-0) got the Nationals out of a bases-loaded jam in the sixth and earned his first victory since Sept. 4, 2003.

John Patterson, the Nats starter Sunday, gave up four runs and seven hits in 5 2/3 innings.

"We got some help today, and we needed it," Robinson said. "The way we played the first ballgame of the series, I thought it was very important to come back and take the series and get some momentum."

The Nationals lost Friday's game 6-3 to the Cubs after committing two costly errors in the eighth inning. HOWARD FENDRICH (AP)

UNLIKELY HERO: Orioles' reserve Sal Fasano, right, celebrates with Jeff Fiorentino after homering in Chicago on Sunday.

O's Bench Bests the White Sox, 6-2

Fasano, Newhan help salvage split in Chicago

ORIOLES | The Chicago White Sox did not lead for the first time this season, thanks to two very unlikely sluggers.

Sal Fasano and David Newhan hit their first home runs of the season, and both drove in two runs in the Baltimore Orioles' 6-2 victory over the White Sox on Sunday.

Chicago set a major league record by having a lead in 37 straight games to begin a season. That also tied the 1934 Yankees and 1942 Cardinals for the third-longest overall streak with a lead.

The Orioles used seven strong innings from Erik Bedard and two RBIs apiece from Fasano and Newhan to build a 4-0 lead on their way to a split of the four-game series between division leaders.

Fasano led off the third with a homer in his first major league at-bat since September 2002.

Newhan came into the game hitting .156 but homered leading off the sixth.

Bedard (4-1) won his fourth straight decision. (AP)

Early Mishap Costs Patrick Indy Pole

AUTO RACING | A scary bobble in the first turn of her first qualifying lap for the Indy 500 nearly turned a stellar week into a disaster for Danica Patrick.

Patrick, hoping to become the first woman to win the pole at auto racing's most famous track, saved the car and somehow salvaged a lap of 224.920 mph. She followed with three of the fastest laps of the rain-delayed first day of time trials for the May 29 race, averaging 227.004 for the 10-mile run.

That turned out to be good enough for fourth, the inside of the second row, in what is expected to be a 33-car field.

Patrick is the fourth woman to qualify for the Indy 500 and the only female entered this year. The best previous qualifying effort by a woman was sixth by Lyn St. James in 1994. (AP)

60

The number of career tour wins for Annika Sorenstam following her 10-stroke victory at the Chick-fil-A Charity Championship in Atlanta on Sunday afternoon.

KEEPERS: With Antawn Jamison, left, and Gilbert Arenas, far right, under contract, the Wizards are going to try to sign free agent-to-be Larry Hughes, who is confident he will remain in Washington.

Wizards Have New Hope

Despite Heat's sweep, team excited about future

WIZARDS | The owner wheeled out a cake to celebrate the selection of two All-Star reserves. Confetti fell in a delirious MCI Center when a playoff berth was clinched. T-shirts were printed to commemorate a first-round victory.

Longtime NBA observers in other cities chuckled at the hoop-la, but these were the Washington Wizards, who had spent the better part of two decades steeped in a malaise of futility.

But the barriers fell this season and the team won their first playoff series victory since 1982.

"There is a lot of character in this locker room," Gilbert Arenas said after Saturday night's 99-95 Game 4 loss to the Miami Heat. "We won't let four games stop what we're trying to do here."

The Wizards can legitimately be called a team on the rise, led by Arenas, Larry Hughes and Antawn Jamison, who are much more exciting than their blah nickname, the Big Three.

The defensive-minded Hughes will be a free agent this summer and will command a huge price, but he's indispensable to the team's chemistry and expects to return.

"I plan on it," Hughes said.

Even assuming that the Big Three return intact, coach Eddie Jordan is the first to acknowledge that the team needs more. An athletic big man is tops on the list, especially now that Kwame Brown isn't expected back. President of basketball operations Ernie Grunfeld is a savvy wheeler-and-dealer, so there's little doubt Washington will be active this offseason.

If all goes according to plan, getting swept out of the playoffs will not be an acceptable way to end next season.

"Anything less than ... competing for a championship is a failure," Jamison said. JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Pistons Tie Series at 2

Detroit uses Indiana's first-quarter drought to coast to 89-76 win

NBA | Just when the Indiana Pacers thought they couldn't possibly shoot any worse, the Detroit Pistons proved them wrong.

Chauncey Billups scored 29 points and the Pistons used a 19-1 first-quarter run to beat the Pacers 89-76 Sunday, tying their best-of-seven Eastern Conference series at

Game 5 will be in Detroit on Tuesday night.

Just as they did Friday night, when they blew an 18-point lead but managed to hold on for a 79-74 victory, the Pacers went cold from the field. But this time it cost them the game.

This collapse, though, came in the first quarter, when a free throw by Jamaal Tinsley was their only point in a stretch of almost eight minutes.

Rasheed Wallace had 17 points and 12 rebounds, and Richard Hamilton added 13 points and seven assists for the Pistons. (AP)

Big Days for Martinez, Torre And Johnson in Yanks' Win

Tino Martinez hit two more homers to give him eight in eight games, and Randy Johnson pitched well enough to get his 250th win as the Yankees defeated the Oakland Athletics 6-4 on Sunday. Oddly, Johnson (4-2) became the 42nd pitcher to reach 250 victories, but didn't strike out a batter for the first time since 2000. In addition, Joe Torre won his 1,800th game, becoming just the 13th manager in major league history to reach the mark. (AP)

Tomas Vokoun, named the tournament's best goalie, made 29 saves in earning the shutout. The Czechs hadn't won the gold since 2001 when they captured their third straight. It is their fifth world championship since 1996. (AP)

Body Language | Medical Librarian

PAULA KITENDAUGH, 37

JOB: Systems librarian at the National Library of Medicine in Bethesda

SALARY: $74,000 (since it's a government job, salaries are determined by the General Schedule)

EDUCATION: Bachelor's degrees in economics and international studies from the University of Washington; master's in library and information science from Catholic University

WHAT SHE DOES: Kitendaugh is one of a handful of managers that plan and oversee MedlinePlus.gov, a site that provides the public with health news and information about conditions, diseases, wellness and more. About half her time is spent deciding what pages should feature and how they should look; she also works with programmers to make sure it "behaves" the way it's intended.

Lower-level librarians seek out links to resources of varying levels of depth; while some users just need the basics, others "really want what their doctor is reading." Kitendaugh spot-checks their work and makes sure the pages are reviewed twice a year, both to update content and to make sure all their pieces still work — for example, to check that a URL hasn't been "hijacked by some porn site." (This actually happened.) The other half of her time is spent on long-term projects, such as spearheading a Spanish-language translation of the site.

WOULD YOU WANT HER JOB? Luddites need not apply. "I really can't imagine any part of librarianship that now isn't heavily computer based," said Kitendaugh, who admitted she rarely touches books at work. "As soon as a [medical] book is published, of course, it's almost already out of date," she said.

HOW YOU CAN GET HER JOB: Job opportunities are expected to be very good, because of a wave of librarians expected to retire through 2012, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics (bls.gov). For Kitendaugh's position and most librarian jobs, you'll need a master's in library science. A background or specialization in technology or health care can be helpful. Kitendaugh didn't have a medical background, just an interest in it, and has taken college-level courses in medical terminology.

CAN'T WE ALL JUST GET ALONG? "Raymond" traded on realistic family situations, not the silliness and easy sarcasm that helped push the sitcom close to extinction.

Say Good Night, Ray

FINALE | "Everybody Loves Raymond" wasn't hip, wasn't cool and missed out on the magazine covers that usually fawn over flavor-of-the-season TV shows.

Instead, it settled for a nine-season run, consistently high ratings, 12 Emmy Awards and the rare virtue of leaving before it ran out of laughs.

But what counts for creator Phil Rosenthal is what's symbolized by the photos on his office wall of Jackie Gleason of "The Honeymooners" and Sid Caesar and Imogene Coca of "Your Show of Shows" — humor for the ages.

The final episode airs at 9 p.m. tonight. It's preceded by a one-hour retrospective at 8 p.m.

The show's departure, on the heels of "Friends," "Frasier" and "Sex and the City," increases the sitcom shortfall. This year, "Everybody Loves Raymond" is the only top-10 comedy.

As with most enduring sitcoms, "Everybody Loves Raymond" was rooted in simplicity: A husband, wife and kids and the extended family that infringed on their lives.

There was bickering, grudging affection and various family crises, usually minor, for Ray and Debra Barone, played by series star Ray Romano and Patricia Heaton. He brought to the marriage his meddling parents (Doris Roberts and Peter Boyle) and sad-sack brother (Brad Garrett).

For Romano, "stories I can relate to and identify with" are what he values in comedy. "It's what I think is the one thing appeals to the audience: They see themselves and then you have to make it funny."

Other sitcoms have exited with an expanded finale; Rosenthal rejected that approach. "There's a pressure to have a good episode and for it to have some emotional resonance, a little bit more than normal without going too over the top with life-changing moments, which we're not going to do," he said.

The show's outline was taken from Romano's life, said Rosenthal: He and his family lived near his parents, and his older brother was a police officer who often muttered darkly that, while he faced criminals and bullets, "everybody loves Raymond."

Writing what you know was the show's mantra: "It's the happy, or unhappy, marriage of our families. Ninety percent of what you see on the show happened to me or Ray or one of the other writers."

Will They Still Love Him?

THE FUTURE | "Everybody Loves Raymond" was a gift for its cast. So where do the actors go from here?

RAY ROMANO: He wants to continue his standup comedy and would consider another sitcom, but probably not on a broadcast network. As for films, "My track record isn't good so far," said Romano. He had better luck with the animated "Ice Age" and will be back with "Ice Age 2," but he's giving live action another try with the upcoming "Grilled."

PATRICIA HEATON: She has a development deal with ABC and a preference for comedy, although no series is set for now.

BRAD GARRETT: "I have that odd dynamic: I'm picky and not in demand. It's a brutal combination," joked the hulking actor. But seriously, folks, there's talk of a spinoff with Garrett, 45, and Monica Horan reprising their roles. He also plans a standup comedy tour this spring. DORIS ROBERTS: "Who knows after this? Nobody writes for older people," said the 74-year-old Roberts an outspoken critic of Hollywood's age bias. The stage, screen and TV performer is in the film "Lucky 13," and reportedly is set to co-star in Adam Sandler's "Nana's Boy."

PETER BOYLE: Although he was the only series lead to miss out on an Emmy despite repeated nominations, Boyle could be allowed to rest on his laurels from a long, distinguished career. But word is the 69-year-old actor is looking for another TV show. LYNN ELBER (AP)

The new 'Star Wars' game offers a sneak peek and epic action

VIDEO GAMES | For those of us who spent most of our childhood — and some of our adulthood — daydreaming about what it would be like to be a Jedi Knight or a Sith Lord, the new "Star Wars" game for PlayStation 2 and Xbox is the answer to our prayers.

But expect a temporary case of attention deficit disorder brought on by the Dark Side.

Fans awaiting the newest "Star Wars" movie have a rare opportunity to look at the game before the film hits theaters on Thursday, including more than 12 minutes of footage taken directly from the movie.

From the first moment on, you can play as both Anakin Skywalker and Jedi Master Obi-Wan Kenobi — battling gun-wielding droids, using the Force to move objects out of your way and ultimately testing yourself against the most unlikely of enemies.

As you advance through the 16 levels, you earn skill points that allow you to decide which aspects of both the Light and Dark Side of the Force you want to improve.

Between and within levels, players even get the chance to watch clips from the movie that drive the game and movie story line.

Not only does the game plot mimic the movie, but the sound effects, stunt movement and visuals are amazingly similar to the views and settings of the film.

The game could be a little longer, but the multiplayer and bonus levels can keep you entertained for hours. In versus mode, choose from a wide array of characters like Obi-Wan, Mace Windu and the newly-turned-evil Darth Vader in a Mortal Combat-style lightsaber duel.

In the words of Master Yoda, buy this game you should.

'Wonderfalls' Creator in Prime-Time

RETURNS | Rejoice, "Wonderfalls" fans. Tim Minear, creator of the quirky WB dramedy cut off in its prime, is the writer, director and executive producer of "The Inside," launching June 8 on Fox. It focuses on the FBI's Violent Crimes Unit and stars Rachel Nichols as rookie agent Rebecca Locke and Peter Coyote as the supervisor of a rogue unit who hires Rebecca because of her violent secret. In other words, it imitates proven success and won't scare the suits. (EXPRESS)

Music starmaker Clive Davis steps in to judge contestants

FINAL THREE | Record mogul Clive Davis will be returning to “American Idol” this week to give his expert opinion on this year’s remaining finalists.

Davis, who gushed over Fantasia last year before she was crowned champ, will appear on the Fox show Tuesday, a week before the season finale.

each of the “Idol” winners and that of runner-up Clay Aiken. Each of their albums has sold more than 1 million copies.

In a statement to the Associated Press, Davis — who launched the careers of Alicia Keys and Whitney Houston, among others — said he was excited to return to the talent competition.

“American Idol’ has confounded skeptics and unexpectedly given me special artists to collaborate with,” he said. “I will be looking at this year’s semifinalists with a sharp eye, hoping our amazing streak can continue.”

The remaining “Idol” contestants are Bo Bice of Helena, Ala.; Vonzell Solomon of Fort Myers, Fla.; and Carrie Underwood of Checotah, Okla. (AP)

Author Jan Pottker knows Georgetown's famous addresses

A celebrity tell-all author could once see all from her window into Jacqueline Kennedy's mother's backyard. Senators on a losing presidential ticket own houses a block apart. A newspaper editor immortalized in film walks in the footsteps of an assassinated 19th century president's son. All within a few blocks in Georgetown.

"This is the celebrity neighborhood in Washington, D.C.," says Jan Pottker, author of "Celebrity Washington: Who They Are, Where They Live and Why They're Famous."

Pottker leads two-hour walking tours of an area bounded by 30th, 34th, M and P Streets, periodically stopping to point out high-profile homes. But unlike Hollywood, these celebrity sidewalks have no gold stars.

"The Auchinclosses were very, very unhappy about it."

JAN POTTKER
ON KITTY KELLEY'S VIEW FROM HER HOME STRAIGHT INTO
JACKIE KENNEDY'S MOM'S BACKYARD

Kitty Kelley, who writes gossip, unauthorized biographies about the rich and famous, lives in a house mostly hidden by a tall brick wall, trees and shrubs. From the rear, Kelley could see into the backyard of Jacqueline Kennedy's mother, Janet Auchincloss. "The Auchinclosses were very, very unhappy about it," Pottker said.

When Sen. John Warner, R-Va., was married to Elizabeth Taylor and the couple lived a few blocks away, Pottker said, Kelley was reportedly in the habit of sending her husband to bring home the celebrity couple's trash on garbage-collection days so she could pick through it for book material. Kelley said that isn't so: "Really colorful, but very apocryphal."

Memories of John and Jacqueline Kennedy are all over Georgetown.

HOMING INSTINCT:

Clockwise from top: Madeleine Albright talks to the press at her Georgetown home; John F. Kennedy and daughter Caroline leave their house in 1961; former North Carolina Senator John Edwards' home is on the market.

Star Tours

The senator, his wife and young daughter Caroline lived at 33rd and N streets while he served in the Senate and during his 1960 presidential campaign.

After Kennedy's assassination, Mrs. Kennedy, Caroline and son John Jr. returned to another N Street house. "Sometimes the tourists would bring ladders to the house to look in the upper windows," Pottker said.

The house across from where Mrs. Kennedy lived as a widow had been the home of Robert Todd Lincoln, a son of Abraham Lincoln. Its current occupants are former Washington Post executive editor Ben Bradlee and his wife, Sally Quinn.

A few blocks west are the homes of Massachusetts Sen. John Kerry and former North Carolina Sen. John Edwards. Edwards owns a yellow house on a block of P Street lined with the tracks from long-ago trolley cars. He recently put it on the market.

When the Senate meets, Kerry stays a block over on trolley track-lined O Street, in a Federal-style house with a white portico that his wife, Teresa Heinz Kerry, inherited from her first husband.

The Kerrys live around the corner from former Secretary of State Madeleine Albright.

The Post's LISA DE MORAES was online Friday to talk reality TV and who she wouldn't want to be stranded with on a desert island. | washingtonpost.com/liveonline

Has Paula [Abdul] been humbled?

Not at all, it would appear, based on her performance this week on "American Idol." No trace of humility when she turned to the studio audience to acknowledge the wild applause they were giving her to show their support for her after word got out that she allegedly had sex with one of the contestants from a previous edition of the show. It would seem they do not care and perceive her as a victim. Which is really interesting in a sort of what the %$* way.

I'm a big "Amazing Race" fan, but it seems so far below the cultural radar. Is a family edition really the way to get more viewers? Do we want to see families stressed out and parents screaming at their children?

No, we do not want to see parents screaming at their children. Nor do we want to see husbands shoving their wives. Oh wait, yes we do, that edition of Amazing Race did really well.

I'm sorry but am I the only one that had a tough time watching this season of the Apprentice? I barely watched any of it the other night and probably won't really watch the finale next week. Who's with me?

Relax, you are not the only one. I kept checking my watch during the episode and was stunned to find out that there was so much time left to go in the hour, which is never a good sign. That said, I will watch the last episode next week; it's my job.

Will you be watching Rob and Ambuh's wedding on CBS and/or the Mr. and Mrs. Britney Spears Trainwreck, I mean, reality show?

I must watch both. It's my job. It's a very tough job. I need a raise.

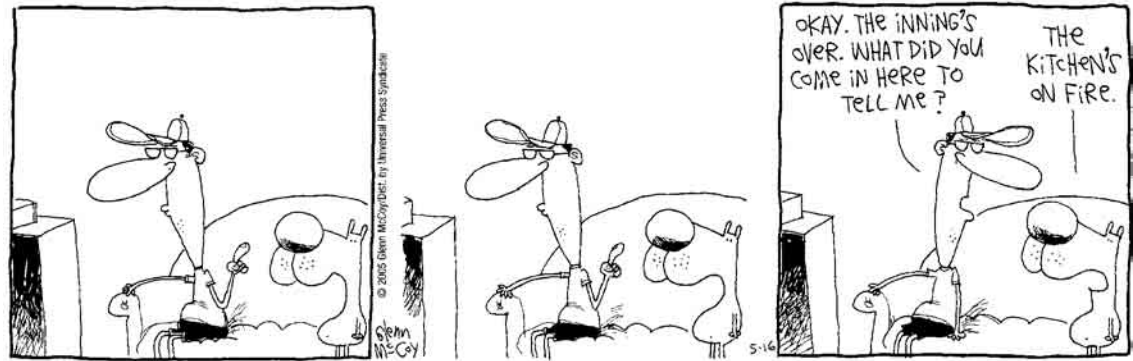

If you had to choose, who would you rather be stranded on a desert island with for 10 years — Nancy Grace or Katie Couric?

I would swim out into the ocean in hopes of becoming a snack for a shark.

No Instructions Necessary

I WAS APPALLED at the front-page picture on Friday's Express that shows a man leaping from one concrete slab to another at Germany's Memorial to the Murdered Jews of Europe. The caption below read, "[W]ith no instructions on how to approach the memorial, visitors wandered the field of concrete slabs, posed for photos and, in some cases, jumped from one slab to another." Do people really need "instructions" not to get on top of the slabs and jump across them? Has it ever been right to jump across any memorial? One would think the words "memorial" and "murdered" are "instructions" enough for one to refrain from such disrespect. That man's action mocks everything the memorial stands for and insults the living and the dead.

He Hears Many Voices in His Head, But He Is Not Insane

"I'm not crazy, I'm not smoking crack," DAVE CHAPPELLE told Time magazine. "I'm definitely stressed out," said Chappelle, who went to South Africa last month for a "spiritual retreat." "You hear so many voices jockeying for position in your mind that you want to make sure that you hear your own voice," he said. (AP)

The voices told Dave to tell the world that he heard voices, but is not crazy.

CRIME

When You're Not Famous, They Arrest You for This

If no one is home when GOLDIE HAWN returns to visit the Takoma Park, Md., duplex where she grew up, she finds a neighbor to let her in. Once, the actress sneaked in through a front window the owner had left unlocked, then wandered around. That someone else lives there, and has for 23 years, doesn't hinder her. In her new book, "Goldie: A Lotus Grows in the Mud," Hawn calls the current occupant "the nice lady I know who bought the house from Mom." She also calls Takoma Park "the Holy Grail of my Mind." Recently, the owner, Donna Wulkan, renovated the kitchen, but she told The Washington Post that she's afraid to break the news to Hawn. (AP)

HAIR

Natalie Goes All THX 1138

When she appeared in Cannes with George Lucas and other "Star Wars" co-workers, it was impossible not to notice that NATALIE PORTMAN had done something different to her hair. Lucas super-fans had a collective rage blackout when it was revealed that she is not, we repeat NOT, starring in a remake of early Lucas film "THX 1138," which featured a world of bareheaded, oppressed humans. Time magazine reported what is a very dull truth indeed: Portman's head was shaved for a prison scene in the upcoming film "V for Vendetta." (EXPRESS)

Academia Struggles To Unpack This Message

PARIS HILTON's long-awaited Carl's Jr. television commercial will debut Tuesday during "Entertainment Tonight." In it, she slaps suds on a Bentley and chomps on a burger. The ad features Hilton's signature tag line doubling as a reference to the jalapeno-pepper laden sandwich — "that's hot." "We did see her eat a couple of them at the shoot," said the CEO of CKE Restaurants Inc. (AP)

Does it objectify Paris? Fatty burgers? Scrawny women eating fatty burgers?

LOGIC

'Also, I Don't Want Her To Attack Me or Stalk Me'

GUS VAN SANT doesn't think Courtney Love should see "Last Days," his "fictional reflection" on the life of Kurt Cobain, he told Reuters in Cannes. "I'd like her to see the film, but I also know it's something that might just be too painful, too disturbing," he said. Love wasn't with Cobain during his final days, and Van Sant did not cast an equivalent of her, he told the Associated Press. "We were afraid that she was going to sue us." (EXPRESS)

ROBIN WILLIAMS has filed a federal lawsuit claiming that a look-alike named Michael Clayton duped a reporter and a charity organizer into thinking he was the real Williams. The look-alike's agent allegedly called reporters in September to set up an airport interview. C.J., a Minneapolis Star Tribune gossip columnist, interviewed the man and wrote that he "knows how to settle down and blend in; when there's no movie, he changes the hair color. If that guy wasn't blond, he'd look just like Robin Williams, some travelers seemed to be thinking." "I was completely suckered," C.J. wrote four days later after discovering the man was really Clayton. (AP)

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Now is not the time to play roles for which you are unsuited; trying to be something you're not can lead to disaster — now or later.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Keep a close eye on personal property; the chances of losing a prized possession are mounting. Time may seem short during the evening.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be especially careful to demonstrate self-confidence when you are with your peers. People are very likely looking to you for the answers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Give personal matters at home a little more time and attention. Neglect for those around you is not likely to be soon forgiven.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It's time to nip those rumors in the bud. You may want to go on a fact-finding mission of your own to uncover the truth.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You may have a reason to concentrate more closely on health issues. Later in the day you may find yourself in the hot seat unexpectedly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Self-confidence and self-reliance must not be confused with arrogance; take care, that you don't let one turn into the other.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Make sure you get all the facts before you make a firm judgment. Jumping to conclusions can only cause confusion and, perhaps, heartache.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be ready for a new beginning of sorts. You needn't be afraid or insecure; remain open-minded and positive at all times.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) It's time to set your mind on higher goals; you've been holding yourself back because you haven't set your sights high enough.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Look to friends for assistance and guidance. A good friend has been in your shoes; you won't be turned away when you ask for help.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't be overly concerned with outward appearances. Look beneath the surface, read between the lines and dig deeper for answers.
